

ABSTRACT

A neutron amplifier assembly of the invention includes an array of fissile material which is subjected to a primary neutron flux. According to the invention a thin layer of fissile material is located on the inner surface of a hollow support cylinder of moderator material, the diameter of the cylinder being chosen such that the array is close to criticality.